

NINE QUESTIONS TO ANSWER TO KNOW WHETHER YOU WOULD BE A GREAT LEADERSHIP AND EXECUTIVE COACH

Sometimes your next opportunity is staring you in the face. Following is a simple assessment to find out whether you would be a great leadership and executive coach. Check the appropriate box depending on whether you agree or disagree with the corresponding statement.

STATEMENT	YES	NO
I have mentored and coached people in the past to be better performers and leaders.
People seem to come to me for advice or help with challenges that they face.
When I look back on my career, some of my most satisfying times have involved developing other people.
I am naturally curious about how people can reach new levels of performance and be better leaders.
People tell me that I am a good listener.
I have a track record of success in organizations or as an entrepreneur.
I have no problem being on equal footing when speaking with executives, entrepreneurs, managers, and/or up-and-coming-talent.
I have verbal agility. That is, I can be in a conversation or dialogue with someone, think on my feet, and move the conversation forward based on what the other person is saying.
People feel comfortable opening up when they are with me.

© 2015 Center for Executive Coaching. All rights reserved.

IF YOU AGREED WITH MOST OF THE ABOVE STATEMENTS, THEN LEADERSHIP AND EXECUTIVE COACHING MIGHT BE A PERFECT FIELD FOR YOU. FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT HOW TO BECOME A CERTIFIED EXECUTIVE COACH, PLEASE VISIT HTTP://CENTERFOREXECUTIVECOACHING.COM.